Montgomery County, Virginia –Montgomery County has published its 2008 Annual Report, which may be viewed online using Flash Player 9 or higher at www.montgomerycountyva.gov.

The “year in review” provides a snapshot of many County departments and what they do to serve citizens, accomplishments and major projects during 2008.

The Annual Report also includes interesting facts about County services, programs and related agencies. Complete with pictures, the report provides an overview of many citizen services and plans for the future.

“Montgomery County made big strides during 2008,” said Montgomery County Board of Supervisors Chair Annette Perkins. “We boosted our bond ratings through sound financial management and began plans to build a new courthouse and two new schools, renovate the public safety building and more.”

“The Annual Report covers many of the highlights of 2008 and the work performed by County employees,” said Public Information Director Ruth Richey. “For citizens who need more information, a comprehensive listing of all departments, their functions and contact information is readily available on the County’s web site.”
